

Privacy Policy

American Massage Therapy Association. All rights reserved.

Any and all personal information provided to AMTA through this site is provided on a voluntary basis. Unless expressly stated to the contrary, and in most instances, posting of such information constitutes approval to allow such information to be available to third parties. AMTA expressly reserves the right the contact any member or other visitor regarding account status, renewals, or other matters relevant to subscription or service.

AMTA reserves the right to study members' and other visitors' movement throughout and use of this site and to inform advertisers of this movement and usage. "Cookies" may be used to perform these tasks and most browsers permit a user to set a preference to accept or reject cookies.

Unless otherwise expressly stated, no confidential relationship is established when any user of this site voluntarily provides comments, e-mail addresses, and/or other information to AMTA or posts the same in conference rooms, on profile pages, or in other interactive programs and features that may be developed and placed on-line from time-to-time. Such information shall be considered non-confidential, and AMTA shall be free to reproduce, publish, or otherwise use such information for any purposes whatsoever.

Use of this site constitutes agreement to abide by these policies.